GIFT OF SIGHT

RESTORING VISION, TRANSFORMING LIVES

In the vibrant heart of Guatemala, Matilde Sarazua, a spirited 83-year-old, stood in the courtyard of HF Nasir Hospital, her face aglow with joy. After 30 years of living with bilateral cataracts, she had finally received the gift of sight on April 18th, thanks to the teams from Loyola Medicine and Humanity First.

Once confined to a blurred world, Matilde's vision transformed, revealing the faces of her grandchildren and the vibrant colors around her. Today, she celebrated her journey with others who shared similar stories of hope and renewal.

Matilde's experience reflected the mission of Nasir Hospital—a beacon of hope for those in need of exceptional healthcare. With her heart full, she embraced a brighter future, ready to inspire others still waiting for their chance to see.
